Evaluation

Collaborative Court Programs

- Served a high volume of participants (4,000 entries)
- Retained most participants (80%)
- Low reported recidivism rates (7% received new charges)

Pretrial Programs

- 11 programs conducted nearly 50,000 pretrial risk assessments
- Reported FTA and new arrest rates for defendants released under RRF monitoring were consistent with defendant's assessed risk levels

JUDICIAL COUNCIL

Supplemental Pretrial Evaluation

Individual Level Data Matching

- Extensive analysis of 4 counties:
 - RA tools worked well to differentiate defendants by risk level
 - Analysis suggests that pretrial programs could be used to safely release more low and moderate risk defendants pretrial without increasing risk to public safety or FTA

OF CALIFORNIA

Conclusions

- The success of the collaborative courts and pretrial programs could be replicated and expanded to maximize safety and more just outcomes
- Risk-informed decision-making can increase release without jeopardizing public safety and appearance in the court

Moving forward...

- The RRF evaluation can provide a roadmap for the new pretrial pilot courts to implement policies and procedures to maximize pretrial release while maintaining public safety
