Executive Summary

The Judicial Branch Workers' Compensation Program Advisory Committee recommends approval of the workers' compensation cost allocation for fiscal year 2023–24 in the amount of $16.71 million for the trial courts and $1.26 million for the state judiciary. The committee also recommends revisions of the Memorandum of Coverage for the participating trial courts and for the state judiciary.

Recommendation

The Judicial Branch Workers' Compensation Program Advisory Committee recommends that the Judicial Council, effective May 12, 2023, approve:

1. The fiscal year 2023–24 workers' compensation cost allocation of $16.71 million for participating trial courts and $1.26 million for the state judiciary; and
2. The proposed changes to the Memorandum of Coverage (MOC), Trial Courts Pooled Workers' Compensation Program, and the Judiciary MOC.

A list of the program premiums is available at Link A. A PDF of the current version of each MOC, immediately followed by the versions displaying all proposed changes, is available at Link B.

Relevant Previous Council Action

At its meeting on May 12, 2022, the Judicial Council approved the Judicial Branch Workers' Compensation Program (JBWCP) workers' compensation premium for fiscal year (FY) 2022–23 for participating members. In addition, the council approved the proposal to increase trial court and state judiciary program funding confidence levels from 60 percent to 70 percent.

Analysis/Rationale

Approve the workers' compensation cost allocation for FY 2023–24 (recommendation 1)

The JBWCP is a self-funded program for which each entity pays a share of the cost based on each member's workers' compensation claims experience and historical payroll. The recommended FY 2023–24 workers' compensation cost allocation is consistent with the members' claims experience and reduction of costs over the past year. Trial court member premiums are expected to decrease by 6.07 percent and judiciary member premiums by 6.15 percent.

The reduction in the premiums is a direct result of the JBWCP Advisory Committee's member education and previous proposals approved by the Judicial Council. The JBWCP Advisory Committee hopes to continue the progress it has made over the last few years in further developing the program.

The advisory committee has reviewed and voted to approve the premium allocation for FY 2023–24. The premium allocation incorporates three years of loss data and payroll data to determine the premium funding for the upcoming fiscal year. Although the JBWCP is no longer operating at a debt, appropriate funding is still required to maintain the cost of the liabilities. The annual funding has been established based on the targeted funding level.

Last year, the Judicial Council approved an increase in the confidence level to 70 percent, which alleviated the burden of the funding shortfall from previous years and stabilized the program's funding level. The program continues to follow a more formal fiscal policy that has led to an overall reduction in premiums for the upcoming fiscal year.

If the Judicial Council approves the proposed workers' compensation premium allocation for FY 2023–24, the program will be funded at the appropriate level to continue covering the cost of claims while maintaining a positive fund balance.

Approve the proposed changes to the MOCs (recommendation 2)

Two MOCs give an overview of the coverage provided through the JBWCP: one for participating trial court members and the second for judiciary members. The MOCs were drafted when the program was first developed in 2003 and have been distributed to members each year since. The program has continued to mature as the industry has evolved. The program's primary focus was on addressing the funding level and stabilizing the program's liabilities.

With the program's funding and confidence level addressed and with a decrease in claims cost because of positive claims development, the program's concern with solvency has been resolved. The next area of focus is on the program's governing documents, including the MOCs for both the participating trial court members and the state judiciary.

Since the original MOCs were drafted, the workers' compensation industry and parameters have continued to develop. When reviewing the program's current MOCs, the advisory committee identified a few areas that did not align with the program's current workers' compensation practice and excess insurance policy. The proposed changes to the program's MOCs align the current MOCs with the program's Excess Insurance carrier's provisions and memorialize the program's current processes. The main areas of change include the following:

- General Section
 - Section A6, Definitions, defines Occurrence
 - Section D, Who Is Covered, includes Unpaid Interns and Trial Court Jurors
- Part One – Workers' Compensation Coverage
 - Section A, Coverage, defines Loss from an Occurrence
 - Section A, Coverage, memorializes Out of State Process/Coverage
- Part Five – Conditions
 - Section A3, Notice of Accident, outlines member responsiveness
 - Section F, Other Insurance, adds other insurances
 - Section H, Disputes and Appeals, updates the disputes and appeals process

The current MOCs reference loss, whereas the excess insurance policy as well as case law reference occurrence when it comes to loss. There is no intent to change how the program operates or how coverage is provided. By defining occurrence, the updated MOCs would reflect the excess insurance policy.

The next proposed change involves updating the MOCs to reflect the current coverage provided to members. When it comes to volunteers, unpaid interns, and trial court jurors, the current MOCs are not specific in defining the coverage. The proposed revision adds clarifying language to define coverage without modifying the underlying coverage itself.

When it comes to out of state coverage, the current MOCs provide no information to members regarding the limitations of coverage. The JBWCP does not provide coverage outside of California. Because of the environment surrounding the COVID-19 pandemic, the recommended changes include language to specify this limitation and provide members support in procuring coverage.

Another change outlines the program members' responsibility in reporting claims and the capacity of program staff and the advisory committee to assist. This change is not to the process but merely updates the MOCs to clarify member expectations and the escalation process.

Language has also been added regarding the process for members with multiple insurance policies. The added language is intended to clarify the program's responsibility in such a circumstance. The added language identifies which policy, if multiple policies can respond to a claim or loss, becomes primary and which becomes excess.

Finally, language has been added to the MOCs to clarify and memorialize the Judicial Council's current process for non-claim-related disputes with members. Adding this language, again, does not change the process; it just identifies a specific process in which disputes are addressed. If a member has a concern and wants to appeal a decision, members will first bring the dispute to the Program Administrator's attention and then to the advisory committee or its designee. The dispute will be reviewed and responded to within 60 days.

The JBWCP Advisory Committee reviewed and recommends these proposed changes to the MOCs. Reviewing and updating the governing documents of the program is an initiative outlined on the JBWCP's Annual Agenda. Updating the MOCs is the first step of this initiative. If the Judicial Council moves forward with approving the changes, the advisory committee can begin reviewing the program's policies and procedures.

In summary, the current MOCs would be updated to reflect language from the program's excess insurance policy and case law when it comes to the definition of loss and occurrence. The MOCs would include clarifying language defining coverage of members' staff, unpaid interns, volunteers, and trial court jurors. Members would have a clearly identified process for procuring out-of-state coverage. The MOCs would also clearly explain the members' expectations and reporting requirements and define a process for nonclaim disputes.

The updated MOCs were approved by the JBWCP Advisory Committee on February 22, 2023, and would be implemented for fiscal year 2023–24, contingent on review of the MOCs by legal counsel. Legal counsel found no concerns or issues in the proposed revisions. The program's members would receive a clear and accurate depiction of their coverage, which would align with the program's excess insurance carrier provisions and the program's current processes.

Policy implications

The proposal has no policy implications.

Comments

The JBWCP Advisory Committee and staff did not circulate the proposed changes to the MOCs for comment but did provide them to clerk/executive officers of the state judiciary and members of the Court Executives Advisory Committee. Staff received no comments or concerns regarding the changes to the MOCs.

The advisory committee has always considered feedback from all stakeholders before voting on any changes or new proposals. The decision to update the MOCs was adopted after comments were solicited from all court executive officers.

Alternatives considered

Regarding the workers' compensation cost allocations, the advisory committee considered but disregarded the option not to approve the proposed workers' compensation premium allocation for FY 2023–24. If the Judicial Council does not agree with the recommended allocation, program staff will work with the actuary to reevaluate the premium allocation to determine another funding level. During this time, the burden of claims cost will fall on the program's fund balance. The program will risk its solvency and may fall back into a deficit.

Regarding the proposed changes to the MOCs, the advisory committee has reviewed them and recommended approval. Although the committee did not consider other options, it presents two options for the Judicial Council's consideration.

Option 1: Review for now; delay implementation

The Judicial Council could defer voting on and implementing the proposed changes to the MOCs and instead use this time to review the changes. Program members and staff would have additional time to review and revise the MOCs. The proposed changes would not be implemented in the upcoming fiscal year 2023–24, which may delay additional initiatives outlined in the Annual Agenda. The impact on the program is that the previous MOCs would be used as members' reference of the program's coverage. This reference may reflect inaccurate information because our excess insurance carrier provisions and the program's current processes have changed since the MOCs were originally developed.

Although the program members would still receive the same coverage, understanding the coverage might not be as transparent and accurately explained under the current MOCs.

Option 2: Status quo

Parallel with option 1, the Judicial Council would opt to keep the program's MOCs the same as in prior years. The coverage of volunteers and jurors would not be accurate, the parameters of out-of-state coverage would not be included, and the definition of loss and occurrence would not reflect what is indicated on the program's excess insurance policy.

In addition, the process disputes and appeals for program members would not be accurately described. If disputes occur, members would not have a clear and transparent process to reference.

The current MOCs would be provided, along with the premiums during the annual distribution at the start of fiscal year 2023–24. As stated in option 1, this outdated information could result in unclear coverage because the current MOCs would not provide accurate information and a clear definition of program coverage.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

The proposed allocation ultimately sees a reduction across the program of over 6 percent. The premiums for FY 2022–23 at 70 percent confidence level was roughly $17.79 million for trial court members and $1.34 million for judiciary members. The proposed premium allocation will have a positive fiscal impact with a reduction of $1.08 million for trial court members and $0.82 million for judiciary members.

If approved, the fiscal impact will be positive because of the reduction in the next fiscal year's premiums. If not approved, the program will risk going into a deficit situation once again.

With recent changes to confidence levels and improved loss experience, the program has successfully retained a positive net year-end balance and funding stability. This gives the Advisory Committee the opportunity to focus on other areas of the program, including reviewing the governing documents and making recommendations to align the MOCs with the program's current processes. Approval of the changes to the MOCs will have a positive impact on operation of the JBWCP. Program members will have a clear and transparent definition of their coverage and the appropriate steps to take.
